

Merry Christmas and Happy 2008 Wishes from the Wolbert Family!

Season's Greetings. Hope all is well with you and your family. Everyone here, Emily, Lisa, Sarah, Miki, and Bob, is pleased to report having enjoyed another happy, healthy year.

Emily (9): I did many things this year. I enjoyed continuing violin. I just got into fourth grade and I enjoy that too. I'm counting on good grades, and a Merry Christmas.

Lisa (13): As I always say in our Christmas letters, this year went by really fast! My 7th grade year was really fun, and I managed to laugh a lot and have a great year. I'm really sorry it's almost over, although I can't remember anything I did. I hope next year will be just as good.

Sarah (16): Looking back at 2007, it has been a pleasant year. It kicked off with a brutal, yet enjoyable season of Lacrosse. Through which I've been able to gain great new friends and memories. School-wise, I have been constantly inspired to push myself harder, especially in my favorite subject—art—and I hope that one day it will amount to something more than an eyesore.

Well, this puts me one year closer to becoming a legal adult. Happy New Year!

Miki (last year she claimed to be 22, so now she must be ... 22?): This year I changed my busy schedule to spend more time at home. I enjoy playing the violin with Emily and I only wish you could hear how much I've improved.

Too bad they don't have audio recording cards yet.

Bob (older than dirt), an independent consultant for the semiconductor industry, is dedicating his spare time to yard work and maintaining his radio antenna "farm". He contributed to the demise of print media by accepting an invitation to appear on the cover of FiveNine Magazine (Japan). Who'd have 'thunk' that with all the beautiful girls around here, he'd become the "cover girl"?

Merry Christmas and Best Wishes for a Happy and Prosperous 2007
